BELMONT PEOPLE FACE HEATED ELECTION IN FIGHT FOR DOG RACE

Community Split Over Whether or Not To Allow Dog Racing at Proposed Whippet Track

The fight which is being waged in Belmont between proponents of a dag racing course proposed for that city, and those who oppose the operation of such a course there will be settled at an election by the people of Belmont, according to action taken Tuesday by the Belmont city council.

The matter has created a decided split in the population of Belmont, as the racing course is seen by one group as a great opportunity for the city, and by another it is opposed because of an "undesirable element which would be attracted to town."

The city council authorized two elections to be held, both of which will be affected by the racing proposal. One is to be held in Belmont proper on September 16, at which time the people of that city can express their views on the dog track. A second election will be held two days later by the residents of a section consisting of about 50 acres, lying between the county road and the Bayshore highway, and north of Ralston avenue.

The second election is for the people of this district to vote on whether or not they desire to have their property annexed to the city of Belmont, and it is generally understood that the decision of the people in this district will depend upon whether or not the people of Belmont favor or disapprove of the dog racing track. In the event that the people of Belmont vote against the dog track, the people of the outside district will vote against joining with the city. The track would be located within the 50-acres sought to be annexed, and the track only contains five voters, all of whom are declared to be in favor of having the track located there.

The race track promoters have a tract under option in the territory adjacent to Belmont, and if the people of Belmont favor the track, will have the property annexed to the city in order to remove it from the jurisdiction of the San Mateo county anti-racing ordinance, recntly passed by tehe board of supervisors, which was aimed primarily at horseracing, but which includes all forms of racing or contests of speed or endurance.

Meanwhile, pending the decision of the people at the polls, both the proponents of the track and those who oppose its location in Belmont are carrying on heated campaigns. The Parent-Teacher Association at a meeting this week passed a resolution in which the race track was condemned, and this resolution was sent to the city council. The resolution of the P.-T. A. was as follows:

"To the Belmont City Council,
Gentlemen:

"Having received definite information that the effort is being strenuously made to have brought into the city of Belmont a race track for dog racing, and being fully convinced that racing and gambling of any kind is detrimental to the public welfare of any community, and to the physical, mental and moral benefit of children, and our homes, all of which we have as our great objective; and to protect which we have dedicated our lives as parents and teachers,

"Therefore, be it resolved, that we, the Belmont Unit of the California Congress of Parent-Teachers, are opposed to the establishment of a dog racing track in Belmont and to the annexation of any territory to the city of Belmont for a racing purpose, and that your honorable body discountenance any such movement, and refuse permission for any such track.

"Signed, Victoria Roussel, past president District P.-T. A.
"Mrs. Richard Rodrigue, secretary.
"Mrs. A. Murray Spooner.
"Mrs. Don Alford."

The meeting was the first of the fall season of the P.-T. A. and was presided over by the new president, Mrs. Ray Kelly, with Mrs. Rodriguez, secretary.

De Molays Will Sponsor Water Carnival Here

Dance and Water Tournament Planned by Council for September 5

The local DeMolay chapter is furthering preparations for a big dance to follow their water tournament which is to be held in the Sequoia high school's pool on Saturday evening, September 5. The committee in charge of the affair is endeavoring to secure a well-known DeMolay orchestra for this event, but promises that in any event a program of first-class music will be provided. Admission to the dance, which will be held at the Masonic Temple, will be one dollar for a couple.

The dance will be preceeded by the water tournament which will consist of a number of events; among them will be the 25 yard, 50, 100 and 150 yard free style; 50 yard back stroke; 100 yard back stroke; 50 yard breast stroke; 100 yard breast stroke; and 150 yard medley relay.

The committee is making arrangements to have a number of diving stars from Stanford, and various clubs of the bay region who will give exhibitions in fancy diving.

The affair is being given by the local council which has invited the councils of the peninsula from San Francisco to San Jose, inclusive.

Odd Fellows To Receive Gavel

Bay View Lodge of Odd Fellows of this city will be host to Odd Fellows from all parts of the bay area tomorrow night when a delegation of about 200 members of the order will come here from San Francisco to present a traveling gavel, which has been in every lodge of San Francisco, and is now being sent out to travel to every Odd Fellows lodge in California. This gavel will be presented to Bay View lodge by Bay City lodge of San Francisco, and after having been sent to the various lodges of this county will be passed on to Santa Clara county. Each lodge keeps the gavel for a month, and the lodge in the county which has the highest percentage of attendance has the honor of presenting it to the next county.

The meeting will be preceeded by a street parade starting at 8:15. Bay City lodge of San Francisco is bringing a program of entertainment for the evening.

During the evening talks will be made by Federal Judge Lauderback, Grand Secretary Hudson, Deputy Grand Master Partridge, Attorney Gilbert Ferrell, and Rev. J. R. Rudkin. Refreshments will be served after the meeting.

All Odd Fellows are invited to this meeting, and any members of the local lodge who can spare the time are requested to meet at the hall at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon to assist with the preparations.

CONCORD, N. H., (UP)—Though the New Hampshire State Prison has only about 200 inmates it has, what is said to be, one of the finest prison libraries in the United States. The library now consists of more than 5,000 volumes and is being enlarged yearly.

Jury Holds Driver In Auto Accident

A jury called by Coroner J. C. McGovern to hear details of the death of Russell M. Currance, San Mateo man, who was killed in an accident on the Bayshore highway last Thursday, declared the accident to have been due to the carelessness of Frank C. Hansen. Currance was killed when his car was struck on the Bayshore road near San Mateo by a car belonging to James Bacigalupi, president of the Bank of America, and driven by Hansen chauffeur for Bacigalupi. A charge of manslaughter was placed against Hansen following the finding of the jury.

Jones Arrested In South After Escaping Jail

Man Who Climbed Over Wall Of Jail to Escape Found In Los Angeles

Lloyd Jones, who escaped from the Redwood City jail last week during the noon meal time, by piling boxes against the jail yard wall and climbing over, was captured Wednesday in Los Angeles. Jones was taken into custody by Los Angeles police at the home of his mother in Glendale.

It is stated in Los Angeles that Jones will not be returned to this county until his trial there on a charge of stealing a car. Jones is also wanted in San Francisco when his term here has expired. As the Los Angeles charge will mean a San Quentin sentence if proved, and as Jones must complete a 340-day sentence in this county on charges of illegal possession of liquor, and of operating a car while under the influence of liquor, he will probably be behind the bars for some time to come. The charge in San Francisco is also one of car theft.

School Buss In Crash On Jefferson St.

No Children Injured When Car Collides with Truck

A group of more than fifteen children escaped injury when a bus bringing them to the McKinley school was struck by a car driven by Mrs. L. H. Smith, 2217 Jefferson avenue Wednesday. The bus was driven by Percy Spellenberg, and was crossing Jefferson street on Cleveland, when the accident occurred.

The school bus was only slightly injured by the crash but the other machine was badly damaged, and had to be towed away. Riding with Mrs. Smith was her son. Both were uninjured in the crash.

Injury to the children was averted by the strong construction of the buss which is constructed to render it as safe as it is mechanically possible. There has never been a child injured while in one of the school busses of this district.

District Attorney Flooded with Congratulations on Appointment

Since his appointment by Governor Rolph as second superior judge of this county, District Attorney Franklin Swart has been flooded with congratulatory letters and telegrams from all parts of the state. A telegram was received by the district attorney Tuesday from Governor Rolph confirming the appointment which was known to have been made Monday. Governor Rolph wired:

Sacramento, Calif., Aug. 24, 1931.

Honorable Franklin Swart,
Judge of Superior Court, San Mateo Co.,
Redwood City, California.

Dear Judge Swart, I have the honor to appoint you Judge of the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the County of San Mateo. I present you my compliments and wish you every success. Your commission will be mailed tonight.

Sincerely,
JAMES ROLPH, Jr.,
Governor of California.

Another telegram which expressed in a concise and pleasing manner the spirit of all the messages was that from Louis Oneal, political leader of San Jose, and one of the state's leading attorneys. Oneal's telegram follows:

San Jose, Calif., August 25, 1931.

Hon. Franklin Swart,
District Attorney,
Redwood City, California.

Just to say how sincerely I congratulate you, the County of San Mateo, and the Governor of the State of California, who has again shown his fine understanding of men and appreciation of a real man and a real lawyer.

Forest Fires Spreading Terror Through State; Property Razed

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 27—(UP)—Five of the most serious forest fires in California this year were belching clouds of dense smoke over Lake, Napa, Plumas and San Benito counties tonight.

More than 5000 men, most of them volunteers, had toiled under a hot sun all day and were discouraged that they had not made more progress by sun down.

Through the night, however, they expected to throw barriers around the flames.

Valuable summer homes, mining property and ranches in Lake county were destroyed. The flames were spreading toward the state line and 173 men were inroute from Reno by truck to make a stand against the fire in Last Chance Valley, near Chillacoot.

The $10,000 home of Samuel G. Blythe in Carmel Valley was destroyed after a brush fire swept up the slopes of Mount Toro.

More than 15,000 acres of grazing land in Napa county have been blackened.

The scenic beauty of the Pinnacles National Monument in San Benito county has been marred by flames that have spread over more than 20,000 acres.

Another blaze was reported near the Oakland Municipal Recreation Camp in Plumas county.

Directors of the fire fighters were too busy to make more than these meager reports to their headquarters here.

Driver Held for Illegal Liquor

G. Dante was arrested by Officers Thorpe and Hogan Wednesday evening and charged with violation of the Wright Act. Dante was found to have a considerable assortment of liquor in his car, including five bottles of gin, two of whiskey, two bottles and a gallon jug of wine.

MADISON, Wis., — (UP) — Two children of William T. Purdy, composer of the march "On, Wisconsin," have been granted both legislative and cash scholarships by the University of Wisconsin board of regents. Both will attend the University, beginning this fall.

NO SELECTION MADE BY SUPERVISORS OF SUCCESSOR TO SWART

County Board Delays Naming New District Attorney; Four Seeking Position

Awaiting the arrival from Sacramento of District Attorney Franklin Swart's commission elevating him to the second superior judgship of San Mateo county and pending his resignation of his present position, the board of supervisors on Wednesday deferred naming his successor until next Tuesday morning.

With four candidates in the field and each claiming the "edge," interest is at fever heat throughout the county as to who will get the coveted position. The four candidates are Edmund Scott, for the past seven years chief deputy in the office of District Attorney Swart; Judge Gilbert D. Ferrell, well-known attorney of Burlingame and Redwood City; Joseph J. Bullock of Redwood City, district attorney of San Mateo county for sixteen years before Swart, and A. J. Stebenne, attorney of Redwood City.

Assistant District Attorney Scott, favored by Swart as his successor, became known as a candidate for the position as soon as Swart's appointment to the judgeship by Governor Rolph was a certainty.

Judge Farrell's application for the job was filed with the supervisors on Monday and was accompanied by a petition signed by 490 residents and taxpayers urging his appointment. Wednesday additional petitions of Farrell's with sixty-three signatures, were filed with the board.

Friends of Scott were busy Wednsday and yesterday throughout the county circulating petitions in his behalf, which according to report were being signed freely.

Emergency School Fund Must Be Provided Under New Law

By MELVIN LORD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, August 27—(UP)—An unapportioned fund for the use of San Mateo county elementary schools in cases of emergency, must be set up this year.

This interpretation of laws passed by the 1931 legislature was made by Attorney General U. S. Webb in an opinion to Vierling Kersey, state superintendent of public instruction.

The new law provides for the creation of the emergency fund primarily to provide extra teachers, pupil transportation, or additional apportionments for elementary school districts requiring such emergency aid, Kersey explained.

The attorney general's opinion holds that this fund, together with a newly created county elementary supervision fund and an unapportioned county high school fund, are required to bet set up this year, although the new law did not become effective until after county school tax estimates were submitted to boards of supervisors.

While this may provide a temporary shortage of funds, the advantages of the fund are expected to make up for the initial hardship.

"Under the new law it will be possible for a county superintendent of schools, with the approval of the county board of education, to provide emergency aid to school districts in which there is a sudden increase in attendance, or in which emergency need for additional funds exist," Kersey said.

"This is a new system for California and is intended to guarantee that pupils in the smaller districts will not be prevented from receiving their education because of the temporary lack of funds in such districts."

Department officials called attention to the fact the fund will not increase taxes, but provides, rather, for a more efficient administration of school funds by means of the new allocation system.

Oil Co. Merger Nearly Complete

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 26—(UP)—Decision has been reached that merger of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and the Standard Oil Company of California would be "advantageous and logical," has been reached by presidents of the two large concerns, it was announced here tonight.

Some details of the proposd consolidation remain to be settletd at a future conference between W. C. Teagle, president of the Standard of New Jersey and K. R. Kindb of New Jersey and K. R. Kingsbury, president of Standard of California, the announcement said.

ED COLMAN STRICKEN

Edward Colman, former assistant manager of the Sequoia Theatre was taken seriously ill at his home at 535 Jackson street Wednesday afternoon and was rushed to the Mills Memorial Hospital in San Mateo, where he was operated on for an acute attack of appendicitis. Mr. Colman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Colman.

GRIZZLY BEARS NUMEROUS IN ALPINE DISTRICT; RANCHER ATTACKED; BUT THAT WAS 50 YEARS AGO

Grizzely bears at one time were frequent visitors in this and neighboring counties, and even as late as 50 years ago formed a question to be recokned with by farmers and hunters in the mountains of this county. Walter Welch, pioneer resident of this county, and brother of Mrs. George Eikerenkotter of this city, writes of early day hunting experiences in this county in the current issue of Fish and Game, official publication of the California Fish and Game Commission. Parts from Mr. Welch's article dealing particularly with San Mateo county are quoted below:

Although I was born at Olema, Marin County, my first recollection of wild life begins in the Sunol valley, Alameda county, in 1866. At that time quail in abundance were to be seen throughout the whole valley. Other game, such as rabbits, jackrabbits, doves, tree squirrels, and deer were plentiful, and Alameda Creek, on the banks of which we lived, was an unobstructed stream alive with trout and steelheads.

In 1867 we moved to a ranch located between "Spanishtown," now called Half Moon Bay, and San Gregorio, on the coast side of San Mateo county. There I saw quail by the thousands every where; every canyon, gulch and ravine contained quail, rabbits and deer, and the whole country seemed to be alive with them; the streams were full of trout, and what at that time were commonly called "salmon" and "silversides" (steelheads).

During the winter months ducks were to be seen in large numbers in the lagoons along the beaches, and flocks of geese would alight in the grain fields along the coast.

The farmers wives and children, and other people trapped the quail, and market hunters shot them and shipped them to the San Francisco markets, where they found ready sales—with the result that from the early sixties to the late eifhties quail traps by the hundreds could be seen throughout the entire country.

In 1872 we moved to a fruit orchard in the vicinity of Mayfield, Santa Clara county. At that time, where Stanford University and Palo Alto are now located, were unbroken fields covered with live oaks, chapparral, manzanita, and Toyon berry bushes, alive with quail and other small game, and countless thousands of song birds of every variety to be found in that part of the country were to be seen throughout the entire Santa Clara Valley.

In those days there were only a few small orchards in the valley, and although the birds did at times destroy a few cherries and peaches, there was very little complaint about the destruction of fruit by birds.

About 1875 it became a fad among the school cridren to collect bird eggs. Practically every small boy and some of the girls throughout the Santa Clara Valley collected bird eggs, and thousands upon thousands of the nests and eggs of the birds of every variety were wantonly destroyed. Some of the boys would put the eggs in cigar boxes, others would string the egg shells like beads and bring them to school, where they would trade back and forth. Out of the thousands of bird eggs collected by children at that time, I do not know of any beneficial use that was made of them, with the possible exception of a few that were secured by Mr. Chase Littlejohn, of Redwood City, to add to his scientific collection.

Turning to the larger mamals, such as bear—I well remember seeing two bear, when a boy, which I have every reason to believe were grizzlies. In 1878 I saw one in the Big Basin, in Santa Cruz county, and in 1897 I saw another in the borders of the timber in the Alpine District, through which the Pescadero Creek flows in San Mateo county.

While on a deer hunting trip into the Big Basin in 1878, I saw a tree in which holes had been bored, and wooden pins driven, thus making a ladder up which to climb to a scaffold built in the tree. I was told by Mr. Ridgeway G. Rowley, who was with me on the trip, that a Mr. Rodgers, who owned a ranch near La Honda, had built this scaffold. On February 24, 1931, I addressed a letter to Mr. W. S. Rodgers, of Boulder Creek, in regard to this scaffold, and on March 5, 1931, received the following letter in reply:

Dear Mr. Welch—My father, Benjamin Rodgers, who lived on the well known Rodgers Ranch, near La Honda, San Mateo county, from the time he moved into the mountains in 1867, until his death in August, 1884, had much trouble with bears there for a few years at first through their killing some of his cattle during the summer months.

I recall that he succeeded in poisoning one very large grizzly by putting strichnine in the carcus of an animal that the bear had killed. I know of no other incident or adventure that my father ever had with a bear.

Ridgeway G. Rowley was our neighbor there at that time. The only tree scaffold I know of was erected by my older brother the late Charles C. Rodgers when he first settled on his government claim at "Bull Springs" on the very head waters of Boulder Creek. Before his cabin was built he established an out-door camp and did not

Friendly Indians In First Meeting

The Sioux Friendly Indians of Lincoln School held their first official meeting of the year at the school on Wednesday afternoon. Seventeen boys were out for the first meeting and registered for membership. Plans were made to bring the membership up to thirty-five boys during the next month. A number of boys have been lost to the club by the graduation from the school. Billy Dusel who is now assistant leader of this club, is a graduate member of this club group. Roy A. Hohberger told the boys a little of the history of the club and the honors which the club has won. This year marks the beginning of the seventh year of activities in this club. At the next meeting on Monday at 3:30 p. m. officers for the year will be elected and plans will be made for participation in the northern California Friendly Indian Pow Wow which will be held at Golden Gate Park early in October. This club is one of twenty clubs in Redwood City under the program of the Y. M. C. A.

Kiku Matsuri Song Will Be Sent to Japan

Redwood City may soon be as familiar a word in Japan as it is in San Mateo county. If it is not it will be no fault of Roy Hohberger official song writer for the Kiku Matsuri, for he wrote a song for use in connection with this festival which is to be held early in October. The song and tune met with instant approval wherever heard.

The song in its original form was heard by the Japanese consul in San Francisco, who was so taken with the music that he is having it translated into Japanese, and is to have ten thousand copies printed and sent back to Japan.

Now how do you say Redwood City in Japanese?

The New Judge

When Governor Rolph appointed District Attorney Franklin Swart to the position of superior judge of this county he made an appointment which met with almost universal approval among the residents of San Mateo county. Frank Swart during his 19 years as district attorney of this county has made a few enemies, a situation which is inevitable, where a district attorney carries out conscientiously the duties which he is elected to carry out, and these enemies worked hard and persistently against his appointment by the governor.

Governor Rolph, however, proved that he is capable of seeing beyond the petty clamor of the few whose interests have clashed at some time or another with the district attorney's office, and of making an appointment which is pleasing to a vast majority of the citizens of this county.

As district attorney, Franklin Swart proved himself an able, honest and fearless official. He hit at whatever he thought was wrong in the county without fear or favor; and there was never a doubt in any mind as to where Frank Swart stood on every question; his conduct of the district attorney's office was ayways open and above board.

As superior judge, we know that Frank Swart will be distinguished by the same characteristics which have made him one of the most popular officials in the county government for so many years. We look forward to seeing Judge Swart honoring the bench of this county for many years to come.

Four Accident Cures

There are four, and only four, basic ways to reduce the present number of automobile accidents, according to a statement issued by an official of a company making brake linings, who is making a nationwide survey of the motorized accident situation.

"This year," he says, "it is estimated automobiles will kill aproximately 35,000 people in this country and will send more than 900,000 to hospitals seriously injured. This is a big increase, even over last year and represents a ridiculous situation.

"We shall never make real progress with this growing emergency until we tackle the problem at its four main roots. Here is what must be done if we are to save at least 75 per cent of the lives now sacrificed annually to our motorized carelessness and indifference:

Separate opposing lines of traffic.
Separate automobiles and pedestrians.
Enforce compulsory inspections of cars.
Eliminate railroad grade crossings.

"Traffic must be separated by parallel one-way roads, by steel or concrete mid-road fences and by elevated or lowered side street crossings.

"Cars and walkers must be kept apart by overpasses or underpasses.

"The millions of people who, unwittingly or knowingly, are driving cars with defective headlights, dangerously worn or badly adjusted brakes, and ancient road-scarred tires, must be made to put their cars in safe condition and keep them that way.

"Railroads, states, counties and towns must co-operate to banish our 260,000 crossings that are causing ten per cent of our automobile fatalities.

"These things, if started throughout the Nation now, would cost hundreds of millions of dollars, save thousands of useful lives a year and give employment to countless needy workers. The work would largely pay for itself in the greater buying power of hordes of skilled and unskilled laborers.

"If delayed ten years or longer the yearly death toll will reach the absurd total of 75,000 or 100,000 and the work will cost billions of dollars, putting a staggering load of taxation on the next generation. The time for us to stop pussyfooting on this automobile accident situation is right now."

Curbstone Critics

Folks are funny, as has been remarked many times before. Some of them travel up and down the street making mean, nasty remarks about other men and to the full extent of their ability, casting reflections on the integrity of the other men. But when these curbstone critics want something for themselves and find those they condemn can help them, they, the critics, do not hesitate to seek their support.

By such funny fellows towns are not built. But they serve a useful purpose in that they amuse those who are one day the subject of their mudslinging and the next the object of their solicitation.

We have had frog races, turtle races; Sebastopol offers a gopher snake race. It's just about time for someone to propose an angle worm race, and then we'll quit.

Advertising Racketeers

(A Worth While Editorial Selected by the National Editorial Association)

Our town may not have the blood-thirsty gang that flourish in the underworld of the great cities, but there is nevertheless a class of racketeers who have their eyes on this city, and are continually slipping in and going out with a generous amount of coin for their meager efforts.

There are very few more harassed personages in the land than the country merchant. He is systematically coaxed, teased cajoled and brow-beaten by these racketeers (who are looking for easy money) into taking on their advertising fakes, and these schemes are without end in number, and in the main practically all without advertising value.

They range from railroad time cards, hotel registers, cafe menus, door-knob hangers, so-called booster writeups, to almost every kind of bologna the mind of a human can conjure.

Several years ago illuminated sign boards with changing pictures were placed along roads adjacent to the city. Cars whizzing along at 40 to 60 had a lot of spare time to read these "advertisings." If they did take their eyes off the road they merely flirted with the ditch, a turn-over, or a smash-up.

Then there came a bunch that sold "advertising" on cards with the order of services of churches. They told the advertisers the local church was hard pressed for cash, and had asked them to help them out. The church got 5 cards that were never used, the printer got $5, and the fakers netted $120 for their profits.

The slicker with the circus shell game has nothing on these birds when it comes to their "con" games.

Scores of times since coming to this city we have been approached by these fakirs and offered juicy plums if we would co-operate with them in their schemes, and we have invariaby turned them away.

We turned them away because in practically every case there was no advertising value in what they had to offer; because their charges to the prospective customer were outrageous; and mainly because they were fakirs, or in more modern parlance — racketeetrs.

There are home activities which must be supported, but the next time one of these so-called racketeers drops into town and tries to divorce you from your much-needed cash —show him the gate—no matter what kind of advertising he is selling.

If you have any doubt as to the probable advertising value of the proposition these fellows offer, consult your local publishers, who in many instances, had the opportunity to analyze the grafts before they were offered to you.

And at the end of the year your bank balance will be the more substantial because you passed up their fakes.—Leader, Pipestone, Minnesota.

Defense Against Epidemics

The epidemic of infantile paralysis in New York City has evoked advice from authoritative sources which the public can well afford to apply the year round. That an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure is a truism that needs no arguing, but the methods of prevention in an epidemic of disease are all too frequently ignored by the average man until the disaster has actually occurred.

The elementary precaution against the current epidemic, which is likewise basic for other disease, physicians and health officials state, is cleanliness. Surely this incurs no hardship for the private individual or the community, but its importance to health can be gauged from the emphatic frequency with which it is urged. Where the exact cause of the disease and the method of spreading it are not definitely known, as in this instance, such careful habits may be considered the first line of defense.

In the ten preventive rules recently issued by Doctor Shirley W. Wynne, Health Commissioner of New York City, four items stress the need of cleanliness. 1. Eat only clean and wholesome food. 2. Dispose of flies, fleas, ants, mice and other vermin in the home. 3. Wash all eating utensils with hot water and soap. Use plenty of clean fresh linen. 4. Always observe the rules of cleanliness.

Precautionary measures so simple, so inexpensive, and so thoroughly within the realm of general observance should not be neglected by any one even when there is no threat of epidemic to add to the urgency.

Should Be Prepared

It begins to look like about the only way to prevent bank robberies is for each town to organize a vigilance committee armed with shotguns and rifles and arrangements made so that when the bandits appear an alarm can be sounded immediately, calling the committee into action. In this day of automobiles bank robbers can rob a bank and get out of sight before the sheriff can be called and reach the scene of the robbery. Every town in which there is a bank should have a well organized and well armed committee ready at all hours to crack down on the bank bandits.

"Many a man thinks it is his goodness that keeps him from crime, when it is only his full stomach. On half allowance he would be as ugly and knavish as anybody. Do not mistake potatoes for principles."—Thomas Carlyle.

CHAPTER 41—

IDENTIFICATION

When the nurse who attended Constance, and the house doctor saw the passport that the officer had sent to the hospital for their scrutiny they looked at each other and smiled.

"It's the young lady —— the very same young lady," said the nurse, as she examined the photograph attached to the passport. "How could the officer say the picture didn't look like her?"

"Well, her hair is done in a different way," said the doctor. "That's what threw him off."

"Such a pretty young lady," said the nurse. "Some one's wondering where you are and worrying himself distracted 'cause you don't come home, I'll wager. Sheila Allen. An American. On a holiday, I suppose, and this had to happen."

That evening the police sergeant appeared at the hospital with the maid from the Athenae.

"I want her to see the patient," he explained. "She can tell us whether the young lady is the Miss Sheila Allen she served at the Athenae."

The maid entered the sick-room timidly and tiptoed up to the bed. Her eyes filled with tears as she bent over Constance.

"Yes," she said slowly, "she's Miss Allen. I couldn't be mistaken about that. A lovely young lady, too. Most kind to me. But very worried in her own mind about some young gentleman."

"Can't you remember his name?" asked the officer.

"I told you I couldn't," said the maid. "Harry, or was it Edward? I paid no attention."

"And the letters that were in the suitcase — are you sure you burned all of them?"

"Of course, I'm sure," she rejoined. "I never thought I'd see the young lady again, and I had no addresses, so I couldn't send them to her. It was only decent to burn them. How would you like it if a stranger had your love-letters?" she finished spiritedly, as the officer shook his head in disgust.

"Now that's neither here nor there," he interposed.

"Well, you're blaming me because I didn't read them," she said indignantly. "How was I to know they'd be important?"

"Now we're back where we started from," said the officer to the house doctor. "I suppose this identification is accurate, but it doesn't help us much. However, the fact that a Miss Sheila Allen engaged passage for France last night at Croyden and then didn't appear to claim the reservation this morning is significant."

"Are you sure there were no other papers among her belongings?" asked the doctor.

"We weren't able to find any," said the officer, "and we looked through everything. We even tore the lining from the bags and from a coat, hoping to find some letter or memorandum that would give us a clue."

The maid, meanwhile, had assumed an expression of mingled fear and delight.

"I was just thinking, sir," she began hesitantly, "that—" She stopped and looked from the doctor to the officer, helplessly.

"What were you thinking?" asked the latter sharply.

"It wasn't exactly a letter, sir. It was a little book with some writing in it, and I gave it to my sister's Tommy, to copy his spelling lessons in. I didn't think any one would want it, sir."

"Of all the stupidity," snorted the officer. "Why didn't you tell me that long ago? Can you lay your hands on this book now?"

"Yes sir. At once, sir. As soon as I can get to my sister's."

"I'll take care of that," snapped the officer. "Where does your sister live?"

Going to a telephone, he gave some crisp directions and then settled himself in the waiting-room. "It will take about two hours for the messenger to get the book and bring it here," he volunteered. I'll wait for him."

The nurse and the doctor went about their tasks, and the maid and the sergeant sat in the waiting-room and regarded each other glumly. Presently an orderly announced that a messenger from police headquarters wanted to see the officer.

"Bring him in," commanded the sergeant. "Well, Martin, did you find it?"

"Yes, sir. But I doubt if it will tell you much," said Martin, as he produced a small, cheap notebook from his pocket.

The sergeant seized it and turned the leaves hastily. "Spelling lessons," he shouted. "He's scribbled all over it, and spilled ink on the pages, to boot."

The maid took one look at the messy little book and began to cry. "Don't blame me," she whimpered. "How was I to know that it was a matter for the law?"

Together they examined the book, page for page. It yielded no information at all. The jottings that had not been obliterated by inkspots and Tommy's scrawls proved to be addresses of restaurants and obscure hotels. On the title-page, and now almost entirely effaced by blots, had been written something that might have been the name of a person, for after it appeared the word — "guardian."

"Never knew it to fail," stormed the sergeant. "The important part is always burned or smudged or torn away. There's only one thing to do now. We'll have to go to the American embassy and ask to have the young lady traced through the records of the passport division. And that will take time. We won't be able to get a report or a week or more. I'll file the papers at once. Meanwhile, we can only wait. But let me know right off, if she comes to and does any more talking."

Errant Boys Found To Be Extremely Bright or Dumb

Check-up of Reform Schools Of State Shows Few "Average" Boys

By HOMER L. ROBERTS
(United Press Staff Corespondent)

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 27—(UP)—The bad boy of today is either extremely bright or extremely dumb.

The "average" boy has little chance of getting into the reform school.

These facts were disclosed in the biennial report of the state department of institutions completed this week. A study of 390 boys at the Preston School of Industry, made by William Casselberry, disclosed some interesting facts as to the causes of delinquency.

Of 1,458 boys committed to the reformatory in the last two years, four were from San Mateo county, the report showed.

"The majority of delinquent youths border on extremes of development," it is stated. "They are either over developed or under developed physically; very bright mentally or inclined to be very dull mentally; over sexed or under sexed for their age; decidedly introvert or extremely extrovert in temperament; very excitable and lacking in control or, outstandingly phlegmatic; their interests are very narrowly focused or they are almost entirely lacking in interestes their social instincts are very gregarious or they are almost entirely lacking in ability to adjust to the habits of others; they have been reared by parents almost cruelly strict or in homes decidedly lax and without parental control."

At Preston every boy is given instruction in a trade or occupation which will aid him to rehabilitate himself when he is released on parole. A report is made each month by the tradesman and instructors which indicates his progress.

Training varying from special shop classes to ordinary apprentice instruction is given in tailoring, shoe making and repairing, plumbing, sheet metal work, blacksmithing, printing, carpentering, painting, masonry and concrete work, mill work and cabinet making, electrical work, auto mechanics, steam fitting and oil firing, laundrying, butchering, baking, cooking, poultry husbandry, swine husbandry, dairy husbandry, vegetable gardening, landscape gardening, general farming and horticulture.

A special parole ethics class is conducted, through which all boys must pass before being paroled. Eight hundred and seventy-two boys were released on parole the last two years, 730 were released from parole by discharge, and 791 were on parole at the beginning of the year.

HOLLYWOOD'S FILM SHOP

HOLLYYWOOD, Cal., Aug. 28—(UP)—With a number of prominent literary lights recently snuffed out in Hollywood for one reason or another, a person very much in the know comes forth with the information that less than five per cent of the "literary big shots" find what they call success in the films.

The information was gathered over a two-year period, just passed.

P. G. Wodehouse, not so long ago, expressed astonishment that a studio would pay him $120,000 to sit around and do nothing for a year.

Theodore Dreiser and Horace Liverweight failed to get along with the movie moguls.

A studio survey revealed a number of prominent literary men writing for the films and here is what they have to say about their jobs.

"It seems to me that no one should be astonished if a novelist comes to Hollywood works industriously with a motion picture concern for six months, and goes home a complete failure," said Frank Condon, humorist and writer of novels, short stories and scenarios. "I know excellent novelists who cannot write short stories, and short story writers who cannot write novels, and playwrights who cannot write either. There is no particular reason why a celebrated writer of books should be able to turn out a smacking motion picture."

Wallace Smith a contributor to many of the nation's leading periodicals found his place in movie writing and now works for Radio Pictures.

"Lately some writers have complained that their undoubted gifts are not employed in Hollywood" said Smith. "Maybe this is true, I have lost whatever desire I ever had to tell others how to conduct their affairs. My own experience has taught me that there is a great deal in adapting one's style to the screen and not attempting to adapt the screen to one's style."

William Slavens McNutt novelist short story writer and war correspondent has stuck it out two and one-half years at Paramount and shows no signs of weakening.

McNutt was open to interrogation.

"What about these stories we read of writers who come to Hollywood and sit out their contracts without ever being called?" he was asked.

"Simple," McNutt answered "They are people who won't do in pictures and the studios find it out. It is cheaper to let them sit than waste time being bothered with hem."

PERUVIAN GNATS WRECK CAR

TAHLEQUAH, Okla., (UP) — A swarm of Peruvian gnats caused Billy Barnes to run his car off a steep embankment, completely demolishing the car and severly injuring Barnes. The gnats attacked him viciously, and while fighting to protect himself, he lost control of the car. The youth was hysterical when found by a police officer.

KNOCKED OUT BY GOLF BALL

OMAHA, (UP)—Willard D. Hosford, vice president of the John Deere Plow Company, has recovered from being knocked out by a sliced golf ball. About to finish a match with friends on the eighteenth green, Willard was rendered unconscious when a ball driven by another player from the 17th tee sliced 50 yards and struck him in the temple.

BEHOLD, THE MAN'S ROOM

FURNISHINGS MAY BE RESTFUL THOUGH ARTISTIC

When you're ready to devote an entire room to a man's interests, you will be doubly cautious in choosing furniture and drapes, wall, and floor coverings, to be sure that though and to w tion ey are beautiful artistically, they vertheless have the rugged quality it can brand them "masculine."

English Furnishings

The most appropriate period furniture to be used for his study, sitting room, or whatever capacity it may have, should preferably be Elizabethan Tudor (of the earlier period), Jacobean Cromwellian, or Georgian, because during these periods in history, the greatest influence was sturdy and robust, and solid framework and severe lines were frequently resorted to.

The Ceiling

Beamed ceilings are most effective, but can be constructed only in a rather large room; if the room is as usual, comparatively small, size the plaster-moulding ceiling is preferable ,possibly elaborated with a colorful figure at wide intervals, or if possible, an arched ceiling gives a room suggestion of added height.

Have A Fire Place

If possible, by all means have a fireplace in the room, and whether he is a batchelor brother, or a proud husband and father, he will appreciate the hours he can spend alone in contemplation near the fascinating flames of his fireplace. The simpler the better, and to be in authenic spirit, plain gray stone, without a mantel, but with the flat Gothic arch provides the best sort of fireplace, unless the room is quite large and it is possible to have a more elaborate type with marble mantel.

Masculine Accessories

When it comes to setting the room in the framework provided by floor and wall coverings, we will prefer the bold, yet warmly soothing colors of rugs from the Near East, and Turkey Red is the predominating color. Their blues, too, are effective and these colors may be subtly repeated in pictures, frames or decorative bits of pottery and lamps in the room. The window hangings may be severly plain preferably of heavy velvet in red blue or a tone that harmonizes with the woodwork. Wrought iron spears will make them hang more effectively, and gold tassels or bouillon fringe will add weight and impressiveness. Lighting fixtures, too should be of wrought iron, or possibly brass, as should the fireplace accessories. By way of decoration, sporting pictures showing hounds and horses. . . mounted fish . . . or big game heads . . . and bearskin rugs will all serve to provide that added sense of masculinity. Ash trays, lamps and book ends should not be used too generously, but should be selected tastefully with an eye always to the general effect of the room. Odd pieces of brass, old pottery, or even pewter are far more effective than the usual run of gewgaws.

Modern Influence

Of course, we must not fail to mention the modernistic room, at the thought of which many men are at first inclined to shudder. But let them first see a few examples of the comfort and restfullness and the interesting combinations for space-saving that can be made, and they will succumb immediately to the new trend. Low, deep seated chairs with conveniently placed book tables and smoking tables are as inviting as the square, soft beds with their colorful veriety of pillows and the severe restraint in their covernings. We have seen some modern men's furniture in mahogany and walnut, as well as in enamelled colors that are as sturdy and masculine looking as the heaviest piece of period furniture could possibly be.

Politically Speaking

By HOMER L. ROBERTS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SACREMENTO, Cal., Aug. 28—(UP) — All's quiet on California's job-hunting front.

A great sigh of relief went up from Governor Rolph's offices this week, after he had filled approximately 50 state positions, ranging all the way from membership on the state board of cosmetology to director of the newly-created department of motor vehicles.

Daniel J. O'Brien, state director of penology, got the job as acting director of the motor vehicle department, after it was found that E. Raymond Cato, superintendent of the highway patrol, was prohibited by law from holding the two positions.

But despite rumors to the contrary, Theodore J. Roche, San Francisco attorney and president of that city's police commission, is going to accept the permanent office as director of motor vehicles. It will be three or four weeks before Roche can relieve O'Brien of his duties.

"Russ" Bevans, formerly assistant superintendent of the highway patrol, was made acting chief of the state division of registration—the position to which Frank G. Snook, deposed head of the division of motor vehicles aspired.

Bevans, once a member of the San Francisco police department, and for years chauffeur to Governor Rolpr when he was mayor, has proved to be one of the most popular of the governor's appointees. It is expected that his "temporary" appointment will be made permanent later on.

A juicy political plum fell into the lap of John A. McGilvray, Sacramento attorney and head of Rolph's primary campaign in this section. He was made legal counsel for the department of motor vehicles, succeeding Harry Huston, Woodland attorney, deposed under the reorganization program.

Roy J. Youngblood was retained as assistant to Captain Cato. William McCarthy was appointed manager of the San Francisco office of the motor vehicle department, while Louis Alborelli was named as manager of the Oakland office.

Among the governor's appointments were 12 new superior judges and four municipal judges, for which there were 1,700 candidates. As he promoted five municipal judges to the superior bench, that meant five more appointments to fill the vacancies.

Members of the California Dental society protested to the governor against appointment of Dr. A. Zimmerman of Los Angeles to the state board of dental examiners because he is an "advertising" dentist. It was contended by the so-called "ethical" dentists that the "advertiser" is a renegade, and not in sympathy with the code of the American Dental Association.

When he returns from his trip to Europe, Former Governor C. C. Young will sit for his portrait, to be placed in the state capitol. California recognizes each of its outgoing executives by having their portraits done in oil. An appropriation of $750 was made for painting Governor Young's portrait.

Not Short of Funds, Says "Scotty"

By E. N. RICHARDSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

TONOPAH, Nev., Aug. 27—Death Valley Scotty vehemently denies that the reason for closing down the work on the $3,000,000 castle in the Grapevine canyon is because of any lack of funds.

"Nothing to it!" he said, "A. M. Johnson and I are not broke I should say not. We've got a couple of millions still in the old poke, not counting the $98,000 I've got buried over on Telescope Peak—" There was a twinkle in his big gray eyes as he noticed two old desert rats "listening in"—"Oh, you fellows are welcome to trot right over there and prospect all you like. You'll never find my cache." The big fellow shook with laughter.

"Why are we closing down padlocking the doors of the big shack and bording up the windows?

"Yes, that's what we have done . . . . turned the place over to the rattlers and the horned toads, with no one left but a watchman to keep the tourists from carrying away the big house in pieces for souvenirs. It's like this: We've spent over $2,500,000 down there," he shook his head sadly, "and it was a good show while it lasted. But we find now that all we have is squatter rights. We made Death Valley famous 'round the world , and now Uncle Sam wants it for a national park. Much as we love our Uncle Samuel, we propose to let him put on his own show.

"Like a couple of drunken sailors Johnson and I spent our money down there, fed visitors by the thousands and never took a nickle from any man, woman or child. Kinder tough, so now we are moving out."

Scotty says he is going to Europe now, London, Paris and Berlin, all the places he went when he was with Buffalo Bill.

Prohi. Director Bars Women as Decoys in Raids

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26—(UP)—Prohibition Director Amos W. W. Woodcock today abolished one of the most controversial practices in prohibition enforcement — use of women in making cases against violators.

On the heels of the general order, forecast yesterday, the director was denounced by a feminist organization on the ground that he was using sex discrimination.

Woodcock's order was regarded as an outgrowth of recent accusations regarding the use of women as decoys and escorts by agents. Recently a young woman in Buffalo, N. Y., was held by police charged with intoxication after her alleged employment by Buffalo agents to help procure liquor. Rep. Charles A. Karch, democrat, Illinois, charged that East St. Louis agents were "associating with lewd women" and employing them in enforcement activities. The order said in part:

"The use of any federal funds to pay women for services in the purchase of liquor, directly or indirectly, is forbidden.

No federal funds will be used, directly or indirectly, to purchase liquor for women.

"Agents when seeking to purchase liquor for use as evidence will not be accompanied by women.

"This order should not be taken as a check upon initiative. It is issued to prevent abuses that have brought discredit upon the bureau and trouble to individual agents in the past.

Carson Taylor, owner of amateur station W6ESA of Los Angeles, Calif., boasted to I. S. Liner, Philippines amateur, that he had just shot an eagle on the eight hole at the California Country Club. The news was forwarded to Taylor's father, publisher of the Manila Daily Bulletin. The elder Taylor forwarded a challenge to his son to play a match lasting one week, the best cards of the week to be compared.

Insurance Company Fights Auto Death

ALBANY, Tex. Aug. 27—(UP) — Attorneys for the Pilot Life Insurance Company of North Carolina are contesting a claim of $25,000 on the death of Frank E. Whitney, fatally injured when his machine left the highway near here, on the ground that his death was "a willful act of suicide."

Whitney's coupe left a curve and crashed through a guard rail on the highway, Feb. 5. He was taken unconscious from the burning wreckage and died in a Stamford hospital March 27.

Two hours after the car left the road, Whitney's father, E. E. Whitney, 65, was found shot to death in the garage of his home. A coroner ruled that he shot himself.

The son left a $25,000 life insurance policy to his wife. A clause made it void in case of suicide within a year after the issuance of the policy.

SILHOUETTE OF NEW EVENING GOWNS INDICATES NARROWER HIPS

LUSTROUS FABRICS IN BIAS LINES USED TO DEVELOP SLENDER EFFECT

We have been wavering for a few seasons between the utter sophistication of the evening gown on long, fitted lines, and the girlish type of fulttering ruffles and generous fulnes below the waist. This season more decidedly than for several past years, there is emphasis placed on the more elegant lines for formal wear, and this preference is closely followed by the use of more luxurious fabrics and more highly ornate means of decoration.

Of course, there are always some girls and women who prefer to look childishly youthful in evening clothes, and for whom wisps of fabric such as chiffon and net are most appropriate. In realization of this particular type of taste, a few of the Paris houses have sent us some delightful interpretations in these more delicate fabrics and although they are not as distinctive as the more severe type of gown, they are refreshing in their charm.

Satin A Favorite

Satin is by far, the most important fabric for the coming season, and it will be seen in many beautiful colors, starting with ivory white, and running through a range of pinky beiges, to the yellowish greens known as sulphur lime, absinthe and Annam. Pink, too, will be well liked and frequently seen, particularly in the deeper tones which wind up in nasturtium red. Although at present there seems to be a sparsity of blues, it is very likely that those tones complementing th pinks will be introduced a little later, and that ice blue will continue to be popular.

Velvet Is Regal

Following satin in fabric significance, we find velvet in various qualities ranging from sheer to Lyon being extensively used alone, and in combination with lace, the lace frequently forming a yoke and the tiniest cape sleeves. Velvets seem particularly adapted to wearing fur trimming and it is interesting to note the return of this fashion after its complete insignifiance during this past summer, in spite of its enthusiastic reception at the time of last season's southern resort fashion showings. Ermine, and the long haired furs will all be popular, and trimming will concentrate on border effects below the hips, and in some instances will outline neclines and provide waistline dcorations of novel interest.

Beading Effect

It is most interesting to see the return of beading as a point of great interest in formal fashions.. It will not be uncommon this fall to see entire gowns beaded in crystal or rhinestone—not so much in all-over patterns, as in delicate scattered effects which give the illusion of a frosted material. Seed pearls, too, will be used considerably, and are most effective on flesh or white yokes which are attached to black velvet gowns.

Metallics Colorful

Perfectly attuned to the spirit of greater formality and dignity in clothes are the metallic fabrics, either in monotones of silver or gold, or undershot with darker, more vibrant tones. The designs of these metallics will concentrate on florals, both in conventional and modernistic patterns, and will also tend toward geometric desifns in soft, subdued shadings of contrasting colors. The French Colonial influence has spread to these fabrics not so much in color as in design and the patterns will be exotically blended in fascinating delicate weaves illustrating Algerion, Tunisian, Morroccan, and Indo-Chinese symbols and figures.

Pencil Silhouette

The styles of these evening gowns concentrate almost entirely on the pencil silhouette, and necklines are surprisingly simple in outline. The cowl influence occurs only occasionally and round, oval, and U-shaped necks are to pe the most popular. Although it is true that they may be outlined in beads or fur, or contrasting color, they resort to no fancies of cut, except at the back where the decolletage may follow a diagonal line. Moulded bodices will taper out into slended hips and pencil-straight skirt effects reaching to about the ankle, and then flaring slightly. Very often we will see entirely beltless gowns, whose beauty of fit is emphasized only by seamings and diagonal lines which follow the body outline in as slended a manner as possible. Rhinestone straps and negligee outlines will also be used to a great deal, and the cape outlines will be followed in the picturesque type of gown suggesting the Empress Eugenie silhouette. This will be particularly lofely in satin and the vogue for beading and fabric twists in contrasting color will give an opportunity for many gowns quite authentic in style.

We're taking our dinners more seriously these days and America has become as much a country of formality as the continental nations which have earned a place in history for the grandeur that has marked their cuisine. Though we are less habituated to rich foods and rare vintages we do pay considerable attention to our clothes. In town we have our modern apartments and pent-houses. In the country we have our delightful rooms which blend the modern and early American types of furnishings admirably.

The Dinner Gown

All of which accounts for the increased importance of the dinner gown in the American woman's wardrobe. Not sufficiently formal to wear to a dance or formal affair, it has just enough distinction of line and elaboratness of contour to make it hold a definite place in her social activities. Although colors have run riot this season through our sports and daytime wardrobes, it seems that black is going to be most important in the dinner gown realm, and that though very deep tones of blue, brown, green and wine will be seen, they will be conspicuous more because they will be in the minority, and secondary to black. These dinner gowns will very frequently be of chiffon, or sheer crepes and will favor deep yokes, front and back, and long, flowing sleeves of beautiful black laces. Only occasionally will flesh or white yokes be seen in this type of gown, though they will be more frequently found in formal evening types.

The vogue for beading is favored in the interesting decolletage of the satin gown worn by Dorothy Jordan, of Metro Goldwyn Mayer.

Tom-Toms Call Indian Tribes To Annual Fair

Old Customs Observed In Granite Ribbed Wichita Mountains

CRATERVILLE, Okla., Aug. 26—(UP)—The throb of tom-toms echoed through the granite-ribbed Wichita Mountains today, calling hundreds of Indians of the southwest to a spot they believe to be hallowed ground where their annual fair will open tomorrow.

The fair—the only chartered all-Indian fair in the world—will be held August 27 to 29.

An old legend among the Indians, the Comanches, Kiowas, Cheyennes and Apaches, says that the Spirit Father meant for their fair gorund to be reserved always for the Indian. To carry out this plan, the chieftains directed Frank Rush, pioneer settler, erstwhile cowboy and Indian scout, to start the fair eight years ago.

Revert to Old Customs

Belief in this legend causes the Indians to revert to their tribal customs of centuries ago when they gathered in the arena which nature formed in the oak-manteled granite mountains.

Early tomorrow the mountains will be dotted with hundreds of picturesque teppees. Squaws will pack their papooses on their gaudy-shawled backs. Indian bucks again will don the dress of the warrior smear their faces with paint and perform their war dances to the weird beat of tom-toms.

War dances will be presented. On each afternoon Indians will parade, depicting the progress of the Indians.

Buffalo Feast

At night, the Indians will gather to feast. Rush will purchase a buffalo from the government and give it to his Indian friends to barbecue.

The Indian fair was started in 1924. The covenant was painted on buckskin, beautifully tanned and finished by the Indians. It was signed by Rush and the Indian chiefs, the redmen affixing their thumb-marks. They could not write.

Chief Hoy-Koy-Bitty is president of the fair this year.

SIDESTEPPING FAILED FARMER

HARPER, Kan., (UP)—Bert Cristes and Dewey Calton, who have farms on a county line, evaded arrest on charges of violating the prohibition law by stepping over the county line in either direction when the Harper and Sumner sheriffs called. Recently the sheriffs "got together" and met Cristes and Calton at the line, declared "there'll be no sidestepping the issue now" and lodged them in jail.

Wake Up Your Liver Bile —Without Calomel

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute.

Grizzly Bears

even have a tent, but slept on the ground under the protecting branches of a large chestnut oak. One sunny morning he was awakened by a nearby noise, and raised up to discover an old female grizzly and two cubs, busily eating scraps he had thrown out from his camp. Brother and the bear looked at each other for a brief time, that seemed like an eternity to the former, then mother bruin gave a disgruntled growl and sidled slowly off into the nearby brush.

That very same day my brother built the scaffold previously mentioned, well up from the ground, and used it to sleep on until such time as he had his cabin finished. That incident took place in 1877. Later during that same summer, brother Charles was riding on horseback along side hill trail, when two bear cubs jumped into the trail ahead of him. He had a large, navy revolver strapped to his saddle and was drawing it, when he heard an ominous growl behind him, and on looking back, saw the mother bear in full pursuit. He quickly pulled his horse to one side, out of the trail, and with a snap and a growl the bear passed to join her cubs and disappeared in the woods. This was probably the same bear family that had visited him at his camp a month or more before.

That same summer of 1877 my brother Charles and myself drove ninety head of cattle into the "Big Basin" to bring them through to another year, as that was a very dry season and cattle were starving to death by thousands in the cow counties to the southward. We lost a good many of our herd through the depredations of the bears that summer in the Big Basin.

In looking after the cattle that summer, we several times came upon young cattle that had been killed by bear, and even heard the bear making off as we approached, but they never stood their ground to defend their kill.

For this reason, I concluded from our experiences that grizzly bears were not as dangerous or fierce as their reputation indicated. My conclusion was that they would never show fight except when cornered, or wounded.

As a pioneer for sixty-five years in the Santa Cruz mountains my near contacts with bears were commonplace. For some eight or ten years after I came to Boulder Creek there were always bear in the Big Basin country and they even wandered over the ridge at night time on to the Boulder Creek side but there were no depredations other than I have mentioned.

Early one morning, during the early days, I called on a neighbor, a Mr. Wm. A. Day, whose place was located in a little valley at the headwaters of Boulder Creek, but found nobody in the house. I had hardly time to size up the situation, when here came my neighbor running out of the thick woods just back of the house, very greatly excited and out of breath. As soon as he could talk coherently he explained the unusual situation as follows:

He had a milk cow that was missing the night before, and heard a noise in the brush at the back of the house he followed it into the woods, thinking it might be the missing cow. Going on, unsuspectingly, he came out on a small opening in the timber on a side hill, still following the imagined cow, when out of the brush at the further edge of the opening came a huge grizzly bear, uttering an unearthly growl, and in turning to run, Day saw not far away two cubs below him. It is needless to add that Mr. Day broke all records in getting out of that neck of the woods and down to where I saw him, as described above.

During the winter months the bear would always disappear, probably going south to a warmer and drier climate (doubtless were hibernating. W. R. W.)

With many thoughts of the "Days of Auld Lang Syne," I am,

Sincerely yours,
W. S. Rodgers.

About 1875 I saw a large bear trap that had been built out of logs, near Bear Gulch, on the top of what is now known as Kings Mountain, west of Woodside, in San Mateo county. I do not know when this trap was built, or how long since it had been in use, but it was in fairly good shape, and I remember that inside the trap were evidences of a bear having been trapped, as one could see where bear had scratched and chewed the logs, and tried to get out of the trap door. Men whom I knew at that time told me that several bears had been caught in this trap.

That at least some of the grizzly bears to be found on the peninsula during the early days lived up to their reputation of being fierce and dangerous, and that they would attack when wounded or cornered, and at times when they had not been molested, is evidenced by the following incidents which occurred in Santa Cruz and San Mateo counties during the sixties and seventies.

A man by the name of Charles McKiernan, familarily known as "Mountain Charley," and after whom the Mountain Charley grade or road in Santa Cruz county is named, shot and wounded a grizzly bear, and was attacked. Mr. McKiernan defended himself with his knife, inflicting a mortal wound, but the bear scalped him and fractured his skull. A man by the name of Schultheis, after whom "Schultheis Pass" in the Santa Cruz Mountains is named, came across Mr. McKiernan lying unconscious on the trail, the grizzly dead beside him, and took him to a doctor at Santa Cruz, where a surgical operation was performed and a piece of silver inserted in McKiernan's skull, which resulted in saving his life.

In 1875 a Mr. Waddell, who at that time owned the property now occupied by Mr. Theodore Hoover, at the mouth of Waddell Creek, in Santa Cruz county, and known as the "Rancho del Oso," was fatally injured by a grizzly bear.

That the grizzly bears to be found on the peninsula during the early days would and did attack at times, and without having been molested, is indicated by the incidents related in the following letter I received from one of the pioneer residents of San Maeto county:

Palo Alto, March 14, 1931

Dear Friend Walter—During the late sixties a Frenchman by the name of Barbone, while fishing in Pilarcitos Creek, in San Mateo county, came onto a grizzly bear. He turned and tried to make his getaway, but the bear was too quick for him, overtook him and grabbed him by the thigh. Barbone succeeded in breaking the bear's hold on his thigh but it grabbed him by the arm, and he grabbed the bear by the nose with his teeth, whereat the bear let go and so did Barbone, and both started in opposite directions. Barbone's injuries, while serious, were not fatal.

Subsequently this bear began to kill cattle on the Dennison Ranch, located near Half Moon Bay, and was finally killed by my uncle, Patricio Soto, with a gun used to shoot whale, that he had secured from a whaling station then located on San Pedro Point, near Half Moon Bay.

Uncle dug a hole in the side of the hill, baited the bear and when it came, fired one shot at it. The bear was wounded, fell into a gully, crawled into the woods and was never seen or heard of after that.

During the fifties a man from Searsville met a grizzly bear and two cubs in Bear Gulch. The bear attacked him, bit him and mauled him around until he fainted dead away. The cubs ran up the gulch and began to cry, whereat the mother bear covered the man with brush and leaves and went away. When the man regained consciousness he made his way to our old adobe home near Woodside, where my mother doctored his wounds and took care of him until he recovered.

During the late fifties my father killed a very fat steer and hung the meat in an oak tree which stood in the back yard of our old adobe home at Woodside.

Father rendered out the fat from the steer and put it in a small keg. That night, four grizzly bears came into the yard after the meat. As it was a clear and beautiful moonlight night, father sat in the dining room and watched the bears roll the keg around, and turn about, eat the fat. Finally father went to bed and left the bears fighting it out.

Another night a grizzly bear came and killed an old sow and all of her pigs, and ate part of the sow. As I witnessed this incident myself, you can bet that I was never to be found out of the house after dark, after that.

At one time grizzly bears were to be seen where the town of Palo Alto is now located. Early one morning during the fifties, a young man who made his home with my uncle, Patricio Soto, who lived at that time in that locality, was sent out to drive in the cattle and ran across a half grown grizzly bear cub. He tried to lasso it, but as he did not know how to handle a riata, lost out. Then all the boys saddled their horses and went after the cub. They tracked it to San Francisquito Creek, where they lost its tracks—consequently there was no lassoing of bear that day.

All of the above are facts.

Yours truly
John Lucus Greer.

R. 1. Box 795, Palo Alto, Calif.

During the eighties grizzly bears had become scarce in San Mateo, Santa Clara and Santa Cruz counties, and what proved to be the last of the species to be found on the peninsula was killed by O. S. Blodgett, on the Blodgett Ranch, on Ben Lomond Mountain, west of Ben Lomond, in Santa Cruz county ,in November, 1886.

MENLO PARK

Hans Agard has returned to his home on Oak Grove avenue after a long absence. He had charge of the stables at the Almadale ranch of the late Dr. Tevis, who bought the property from James L. Flood. When Tevis died a short time ago, the stables were closed.

The new law passed by the last legislature empowering city judges to sit on civil cases and to function in small claims court will put a heavy burden on Judge Hoss. Heretofore the judge only handled city cases that required a portion of his time. From now on he will have to devote many hours to his duties each day.

The grammar school opened for the fall semester last Monday with an increased attendance. The institution is crowded. More additions to the building will have to be made next year.

James O'Keefe resumed his law course at Santa Clara University last Monday at which time the institution opened for the fall term.

Miss Emily McCarthy, who graduated from Notre Dame Convent, Belmont, last June, has enrolled as a student at the Junior College, Burlingame.

A big social event of October 18, will be the marriage of John A. Sutro of this place and Miss Elizabeth Lawrence Hiss of New Canaan, Connecticut. Sutro is a relative of the former mayor of San Francisco, A. Sutro. The marriage is to take place at the home of the winsome bride-to-be.

Mrs. Fannie Bonnalie, formerly Miss Fannie Casey of Menlo Park, visited friends here during the week. She was united in Marriage with Alman Bonnalie, a prominent merchant of Oakland last June. The young lady was born in Menlo Park and spent her girlhood here. She is a sister of W. T. Casey, the widely known plumber and George Casey of Palo Alto.

The city council met in regular session last Tuesday evening with a full attendance of the members.

A letter was read from Felix McGinnis urging the council to establish traffic signals at the corner of the highway and Santa Cruz avenue. He admonished the council that the crossing was a dangerous one and that the signals were a necessity. Raymond Perry, the attorney, wrote a letter in a similar vein. Both communications were filed.

In this connection Colonel Skeggs, in a letter, informed the council that when he had made a study of the situation he would notify the council. Skeggs is the divisional superintendent of this district for the state highway commission.

Mrs. Mary D. Willard, a palmist and card reader, asked for a license to practice her profession in Menlo Park. The requst wes referred to the city attorney.

A petition signed by eleven residents of Stanford Park Annex was read protesting against the establishment of a club house on lots 23 and 2, for the reason that such a place would tend to decrease property values in that vicinity. The petition was filed.

The San Mateo County Trades Council submitted a schedule of wages to be used by the council when calling for bids on all public work. It was ordered filed.

The budget for 1931 and 1932 by a resolution was adopted unanimously. According to the budget the anticipated revenues are $17,-59.49, anticipated expenditures $15,-880.54, and anticipated surplus $1,-668.93.

An ordinance was adopted fixing the tax rate 95c on the $100 of taxable property in the city limits. The amount to be so raised is $8,415. This rate is 5c lower than the rate last year.

The sum of $3000 was ordered transferred from the Street Improvement fund to the general fund. The clerk and treasurer were directed to make the transfer.

The city attorney was authorized to accept the offer of Mr. and Mrs. Plate for their lot on Live Oak avenue of $1050, under the condemnation proceedings started in the superior court some time ago. This property had to be purchased to extend the avenue. A similar action was taken in the case of Peter Bergna who offered his property for $524.96. City Attorney Whitworth agred to have the stipulations made. This will facilitate the proceedings.

Judge Hoss was authorized to purchase the three new civil codes for use in his office, the price not to be more than three dollars.

C. T. Maloney was awarded a contract to paint the traffic lanes and the lanes in the parking places and at Fremont school. The costs of the work was placed at $65.

Owing to the new law permitting the city judge to sit in civil cases, Judge Hoss was authorized to equip his court with a cabinet and other necessary supplies to the extent of $150.

Crane, of the street committee, in a statement declared that it was imperative that a traffic signal on Santa Cruz avenue and the highway be put up at once. He showed figures taken by the highway commission that a total of 7292 automobiles passed that point in four hours last Sunday. The test was made two hours before noon and two hours afternoon. The number going south was 3117, north 3400, south on Santa Cruz, 618, north 157. This is nearly 200 machines an hour. Blake declared the traffic situation was serious at that crossing. He made a motion that the signals be installed immediately . The motion went through without a dissenting vote.

The council adjourned to September 1st.

How They Say "Number, Please?"

Ewing Galloway

IN SWITZERLAND

When the American tourist in Switzerland calls up the folks back home to tell them of the thrill of his first glimpse of the Matterhorn, here shown picturesquely outlined by Alpine pines, he doesn't hear the operator greet him with "Number, please?" But, depending upon the part of Switzerland from which he makes the call, he has his choice of hearing the exact equivalent of this expression repeated in any one of three different languages. Switzerland is a confederation of more than a score of political subdivisions, or cantons, many of which differ from each other in historical background, population and language. If a telephone call is made in a German-speaking canton, the operator answers "Nummer, bitte?" The French-speaking operators say "Quel numero, s'il vous plait?" The Italian for "Number, please?" is "Che numero, prego?" Transatlantic telephone service was extended to Switzerland in July, 1928. About 300,000 Swiss telephones are now within reach of the subscribers of the Bell System. ## Week at the State Capital

By HOMER L. ROBERTS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 27—The preliminary bout over water conservation in California has been staged, and so far as tangible results are concerned, it may as well be declared a draw.

Out of the welter of conflicting testimony at the first sessions of the joint legislative water committee, which has now adjourned until September 28, two facts stood out plainly:

1. The state is a long way from agreed upon any statewide water development plan, as much remains to be accomplished before Governor Rolph can call his special session of the state legislature to adopt such a program.

2. No agricultural district in the great central valley of the state will stand for any new assessments or tax scheme toward paying for the water program; therefore, state and federal financing are the only avenues left.

Little that was new or extremely important to the water program was adduced at the first meetings. As usual, there were those who said "it can't de done," while others just as vehemently declared it could.

Lee Straub, Tulare county engineer recommended that the state go into the power business, financing the statewide program building a power plant at Kennett dam and selling power direct to the consumer and not to the power companies.

On the other hand, Paul M. Downing, general manager of the P. G. & E., held up his hands in horror at the whole plan, declared it economically unsound and said it could not possibly give an adequate return on the investment.

Back in Washington, D. C., Dr. Elwood Mead, head of the reclamation bureau, expressed himself as "confident that California will adjust its sectional differences and get together on a big statewide water revelopment program."

In the Sacramento Valley the so-called "Tibbetts plan," offered by Fred H. Tibbetts, San Francisco engineer, was endorsed by the Sacramento Valley Water Association. Briefly the plan is as follows:

Northern District, the Sacramento Valley—Construct the Kennett reservoir as a self-suporting unit to be wholly paid for by government contributions and power sales, and construction to be started only when, as at Boulder canyon, such financing scheme is assured without possibility of further assessments or taxation on Sacramento Valley lands

Central District, the San Joaquin Valley and metropolitan district of San Francisco—Divert surplus water at the mouth of the Sacramento river if required after completing the development of local watersheds for salvage of sections now threatened with serious shortage and for further developments when warranted This work to be paid for by the central district.

Southern District, the southern counties and metropolitan district of Los Angeles — Bring Colorado river water into southern California and complete local flood control projects. Financing entirely in southern California, underwritten by the state if found financially advantageous.
